To meet Atlantic rollers with their wild and mighty sweep-

I want to know the dangers and the wonders of the deep.

I want to see tall icebergs, all a-sparkle, drifting by

Where the white bear prowls around us, hunting seals across the snow.

c) What are the features of e-mail described in this passage?

It can take days to send mail across the country and weeks to go around the world. That is why nowadays it is referred to as 'snail mail'. So what is e-mail? In its simplest form, e-mail is an electronic message sent from one computer to another. You can send or receive personal and business-related messages with attachments like pictures or other documents. It's fast, it's easy to use and it's cheaper than the postal route.

Just as a letter or document makes stops at the different postal stations along its way, e-mail is passed from one computer to another as it travels along the network. Each computer reads the e-mail address and routes it to another computer until it eventually reaches its destination. It's then stored in an electronic mailbox. With the Internet, this whole process usually takes just a few minutes, allowing you to communicate quickly and easily with millions of people around the world anytime of the day or night, for the cost of a local phone call.
